

New York Pastor Takes Gospel to the Streets

In New York City, Pastor Brian Kelly has a very large mission field. Several years ago, he stood at an intersection and watched the people streaming past and prayed for a way to reach them with the gospel. He knew that street preaching would catch the attention of a few thousand. But the seed planted in their hearts would soon die in the jostle of the big city.

Unless you gave them something to take with them that would not be discarded, the effort was mostly wasted. He knew that the Bible

Let's Not Waste This Opportunity

With recent wins for free speech and parental rights, there's a renewed sense of hope nationwide. These victories, though significant, are not the end of the battle—they mark the beginning of a crucial new chapter. Now is the time for Christians to rise up and make a lasting impact to reshape our nation and protect these precious freedoms.

A Window of Mercy

Former Congressman Jody Hice sees this moment as God's "window of mercy" for America. Hice emphasizes that this is not a time to rest but to respond with gratitude, repentance, and humility. "We cannot squander this moment," Hice urged. "We cannot throw away this time of grace that God has given us." While many Americans are celebrating the protection of free speech and the rejection of radical ideologies, the battle for our country's soul is far from over.

All Is Not Bad in the Universities

A wave of faith and spiritual renewal is sweeping through university campuses across the U.S., igniting revival events, and changing the trajectory of students' lives. Thousands are flocking to gatherings where powerful encounters with God are leading to life-altering transformation. These movements are setting a new generation of believers on fire for Christ.

A Football Team Leads the Charge

In late August 2024, Ohio State University (OSU) became the center of spiritual awakening when 1,000 students gathered for a powerful revival event. Among the voices sharing their stories of faith were several members of the OSU football team, whose vulnerability and leadership set the stage for an extraordinary move of the Holy Spirit.

The event culminated in 60 student baptisms —many of them taking place in the team's ice tubs. The power of the moment was unmistakable, with students visibly moved by God's presence, some overwhelmed by emotion as they publicly declared their faith for the first time. After their baptisms, students were connected with campus Christian groups to ensure they had the discipleship and support necessary for their faith journeys.

Kamryn Babb, former OSU wide receiver and event organizer, shared his reflections on the event's impact: "The human condition longs for hope, and through Jesus, that hope is found." His words resonated with many, and the event marked the beginning of a wave of spiritual renewal that continued to spread throughout the campus in the following days.

UN Pushes for One-World Government

The United Nations (UN) "Summit of the Future" in September 2024 marked a significant turning point in the UN's push for global governance. Delegates from 193 nations met to finalize the "Pact for the Future," a plan that expands the UN's authority on issues like climate change, digital governance, and human rights.

The UN's Globalist Agenda

The UN's "Pact for the Future" goes well beyond the need to tackle global problems like poverty or climate change. It aims to push secular, progressive values on every nation whether they want them or not.

The pact promotes policies endorsing abortion and gender fluidity, usurping control over children in the classroom, and demanding the adoption of an ideology that goes directly against the Bible. These concepts are not merely suggestions, but global laws the UN wants to put in place.

The "Pact for the Future" also focuses heavily on consolidating global power into the hands of unelected international leaders. If enacted, the global governance model would place decisions about commissioned him as a believer to “preach” the gospel. And he knew that gospel tracts had been very effective in previous generations. But even if these hurried people were persuaded to take one, they would likely discard it at the first opportunity.

He remembered a tract in booklet form that someone had given him that kept his attention and was too nice to throw away. It was called “Somebody Loves Me,” by Chick Publications. It had an engaging storyline presented in modern cartoon format. When he arranged to get some samples, he discovered that he could get them at a very reasonable price in larger quantities.

As he began approaching people in the street, he found that enough of them would take one of these to make it worth the effort. He also discovered that few were discarded but put in a pocket for future reading.

Some of the people that he approached were reluctant to take the tract because it was in English instead of their preferred language.

He began to carry with him some of the more common languages, but that was not enough. It turns out there are over 700 languages spoken in the New York area.

Also, Pastor Kelly soon realized that handing out the tracts one-to-one had serious limitations. Even with a team, only a few hundred a day could be handed out to the thousands streaming by the intersection. He came up with a plan to set up a display table adjacent to the traffic flow. There, he could make available a variety of languages as well as tracts that dealt with some of the other religions.

With some concern, he carefully positioned the table on public property to avoid conflict. When no one seemed to object, he filled the table with as many titles and languages as he could fit. Even with the extra display space, he frequently came up disappointed that he did not have the exact tract for someone’s language or worldview.

He decided that he could maximize his tablespace by using commercial display racks like you see in the pictures. Over the years, the demand has increased to the point where he now sets up multiple tables with racks in order to display all of the literature that people want or need.

Pastor Kelly is not given to small ideas. As he continued to watch the thousands passing through that intersection, he couldn’t shake the burden that even those who didn’t stop and take something from the display still needed the gospel. He decided to challenge some of the other

One Conversation Leads to Gospel Partnership

When you hear “missions” what comes to your mind? Traveling to distant lands? Leaving family and friends for years on end? What if we told you that you don’t have to go very far at all to make a significant impact?

One powerful way to get involved in missions—locally and globally—is by supporting missionaries you know with gospel tracts.

A Small Tool with Big Impact

Gospel tracts are portable, inexpensive, and incredibly effective for sharing the gospel. These “paper preachers” plant seeds of faith and spark meaningful conversations everywhere they go. You don’t need a megaphone or a pulpit to spread the message of Jesus. Handing out tracts is a straightforward, powerful way to participate in the great commission and proclaim the gospel “among all nations” (Mark 13:10). Many people from “all nations” have become our neighbors so we don’t have to go to them, they have come to us.

A Real-Life Partnership in Gospel Work

Tim Berends will be the first to tell you how powerful gospel partnership can be. He regularly passes out hundreds of tracts in Las Vegas. One day, while handing out Chick tracts outside a Denny’s on the Vegas Strip, he met Robert. Robert told Tim that he felt led of the Lord to do something to support gospel work. He asked Tim what he did.

After learning that Tim distributed 300 tracts a day in Vegas, Robert asked, “Would you like 10,000 tracts a month?”

Tim’s response was an enthusiastic “YES!” From that moment on, Robert became a key partner in Tim’s ministry, providing him with 10,000 tracts every month. What started as a brief conversation outside Denny’s turned into a powerful, ongoing partnership. Through God’s provision, that connection expanded Tim’s ability to share the gospel and multiplied the impact of his ministry by 10,000 tracts every month!

Supporting with Tracts Makes You a Missionary

Robert didn’t need to hand out tracts himself to be part of the great commission. By supporting Tim’s work 2024, drawing nearly 14% of the student body. This event, organized by New Life Church’s Young Adults ministry, featured a powerful sermon by Pastor Tarik Whitmore, who preached from Isaiah 6 about conviction, cleansing, and God’s call to commission.

During the event, 62 students were baptized on the spot, publicly declaring their commitment to live a transformed life. This revival was about repentance, and an invitation to live out the fullness of the Holy Spirit’s power in every aspect of life. Following the baptisms, students were encouraged to join small groups to continue their spiritual growth, ensuring that the movement didn’t end with the event.

Pastor Whitmore, reflecting on the event, remarked on the difference the event made on campus. “There’s a tangible difference this year. People are pastors that knew of his passion to come for a three-day blitz of gospel tracts, reaching as many of those others as they could.

His strategy was to position other teams and street preachers at surrounding intersections with a large supply of gospel tracts. They would try to get a tract in the hands of everyone they could throughout the entire district. He placed orders in large quantities so they would have more than enough, knowing that he could later stock his display with any leftovers. He scheduled it for the middle of June when New York's streets were the busiest.

Over 40 people responded to Pastor Kelly's invitation, and they were able to hand out about 50,000 tracts in four days. At least six people prayed for salvation with the team members. You can see one of these prayer sessions going on in the lower right corner of the picture above.

Pastor Kelly says that it is not about results, but obedience. There are two sides to the Great Commission: making disciples and preaching the Word. The "preaching" does not specify if you get results, it just says to get the good news in front of as many as possible and leave the results to the Holy Spirit.

The Apostle Paul asks in Romans 10, "how shall they hear without a preacher?" Over the centuries, the church has discovered that not all preachers are flesh and blood. Some are paper and ink, particularly since the invention of printing. In fact, God chose to use a lot of paper and ink to distribute His own words in all the Bibles.

Through the book tables and blitzes, pastor Kelly's vision has been responsible for putting over 400,000 paper preachers last year in the hands of hurried people in New York's international melting pot. And many of those tracts are patiently sitting in a desk drawer or someone's coat pocket waiting for a divine appointment with a desperate heart.

Over the years, a number of other soul winners have heard of pastor Kelly's success in preaching the gospel through no-nonsense Chick tracts. He has been able to coach them in duplicating his strategy.

Anyone wanting more information on setting up public displays, or how they can become involved in funding more tracts for him, can call Pastor Kelly at (646) 267-1338, email: kingjamesbiblebaptistchurch@gmail.com. The Crumbling of the Catholic ‘Church’

Catholicism has long been an opposing force to Bible-believing Christians everywhere. On the surface, this counterfeit church could sometimes be counted on to uphold basic doctrinal issues such as the sanctity of life and the sanctity of marriage. At least, in the Western World.

Now, even this bit of support for moral right appears to be rapidly waning. In 2021, Pope Francis announced an annual gathering called The Synod on Synodality.

The synod, a gathering of leaders and clergy, was understood to be convening to discuss the Catholic church’s mission of walking together, listening to each other, and discerning God’s will in the context of the modern world. Instead, the multi-year event, culminating in 2024, turned into a one-man revolution led by the Pope himself.

The Pope’s Radical Inclusion Agenda

One of the most controversial aspects of the Synod was the move toward radical inclusion of LGBTQ+ individuals. Pope Francis is blatantly pushing an inclusive stance regarding LGBTQ+ “marriages,” adoption by LGBTQ+ couples, and LGBTQ+ participation in clergy leadership positions.

In a written address from the Pope in 2023, he called upon priests to bless same-sex couples, signaling a profound doctrinal shift away from their long-standing position on sexual morality.

Additionally, Pope Francis has developed close ties with prominent Catholic advocates for LGBTQ+ acceptance. His support for the ordination of women further disturbs some of the more conservative faithful.

Pope Declares All Roads Lead to Rome

Another element that has drawn criticism is Pope Francis’ emphasis on interfaith dialogue. In a recent trip to Singapore, he stood in front of a crowd of Buddhists, Muslims, Catholics, and Pagans, and stated proudly that “all religions are paths to God.”

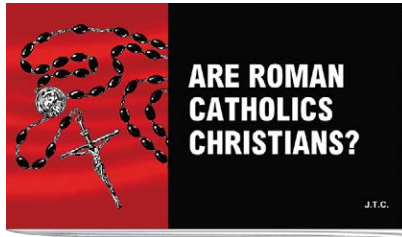

Some of the Catholic clergy woke up after that remark. Bishop Athanasius Schneider of Kazakhstan called out the Pope’s statement as contradictory to the first commandment and the teachings of Christ, which emphasizes that salvation comes only through Jesus Christ. Even a broken clock is right twice a day!

The Pope made similar statements during the Synod, causing many in the Catholic church to fear a move toward syncretism—the blending of all religions into one.

Less “Gospel”—More Social Doctrine

Pope Francis’ focus on environmental issues has also drawn criticism. Some Catholic influencers have begun to question whether the Pope’s emphasis on “saving the planet” comes at the cost of

The Work Has Just Begun

Family Research Council President Tony Perkins also pointed out that the temptation for many might be to sit back and relax in light of recent wins. However, he urges this is not the time to rest. Summing it up simply, Perkins stated, “Our work has just begun.”

Pastor Jack Hibbs echoed this sentiment, reminding believers: “Part of being a disciple is getting involved in this remarkable republic that the Lord has given us.” This is not a time for apathy. We must engage as active citizens, just as early Christians worked to influence their culture for Christ. It’s essential to stand firm on biblical truths that have shaped our nation and boldly advocate for them in every sphere of life.

Biblical Clarity in the Midst of Cultural Chaos

America is in the midst of a moral crisis. The breakdown of the family unit, the rise of gender confusion, and the rampant acceptance of abortion and transgenderism have led to widespread societal confusion. Yet, this moral chaos presents an opportunity for Christians to shine as a beacon of biblical truth.

Former Congresswoman Michele Bachmann pointed out that spiritual renewal is critical for navigating the challenges ahead. “We’ve got to get to work...” Bachmann urged. “[We need] prayer and action.” It’s not enough to wish someone would do something about the state of the nation. We all need to pray and take action where we can to bring about transformation in our families, communities, and nation. This is our time to fight for a culture that values life, family, and faith.

Our Ultimate Purpose

Tony Perkins urges believers to remember that our ultimate purpose as Christians is to honor God and spread His message in all areas of life. “The battle is never done this side of heaven,” Perkins said. “We have to perpetually stand for the truth.” This is a call for Christians to engage in the public sphere, advocating for the preservation of free speech, individual liberties, and biblical values.

As soulwinners, we must recognize that our work is just beginning. This moment is a rare opportunity. But there will only be a lasting impact in the political realm if the hearts of men are changed to bring integrity and righteousness into the government. It is time for Christians to boldly share the Gospel, strengthen families, and to build a culture that values Biblical principles and righteous lifestyle.

Let The Church Arise

Now is the time to rise up, to stand strong against evil, and to seek God’s revival for our land. We are ambassadors for Christ, called to bring light into the darkness. With prayer, faith, and steadfast action, we can make a difference in our nation. It all must begin with changed hearts and gospel tracts have played a major role down through history if they are widely shared.

No-nonsense tracts, like This Was Your Life, The Choice, and Greatest Story Ever Told, have a decades-long record of leaving changed hearts in their wake. All they need is bold soul winners putting them in the hands of those who have been captured by sin.

Others see his support for global organizations like the United Nations and the World Economic Forum as an even bigger concern. Rather than promoting Biblical morality, Pope Francis's cooperation with the UN and WEF accelerates their push for social policies like abortion rights and comprehensive sex indoctrination. Catholics everywhere are observing a drastic shift toward secularism and away from traditional moral teaching.

Synod a "Toxic Nightmare"

The Synod was hailed as a transformative moment to usher in a more inclusive, compassionate, and socially conscious Catholicism. However, the Synod was a destructive force that undermined the doctrine and moral teachings that even Roman Catholicism has traditionally upheld.

Cardinal Gerhard Müller, a prominent conservative figure, has described the Synod as a "hostile takeover of the Church of Jesus Christ." Cardinal George Pell criticized the Synod as a "toxic nightmare," and Bishop Athanasius Schneider warned that the Synod's agenda promoted "heretical doctrines" and "poisonous spiritual ideas" that encouraged the abandonment of timeless truth.

Cardinal Joseph Zen, the former Bishop of Hong Kong, has been particularly vocal in his criticism, accusing the Synod of promoting doctrinal chaos. Zen pointed out that despite global objections, the Pope has not ceased his radical initiatives, fueling concerns that the Synod could lead to a schism or even a fundamental redefinition of Catholic teachings.

An Ongoing Push to One-World Religion

Pope Francis' critics rightly argue that his papacy, particularly through the Synod, is redefining Catholic doctrine to fall in line with secular, left-wing ideologies —especially regarding LGBTQ+ issues, environmentalism, and global governance. However, this shift should come as no surprise to Bible-believing Christians.

A careful study of the history of the papacy finds them with a finger to the wind ready to move in the direction of wherever world politics is headed. In Revelation 17, the angel invited John to view a great prostitute "with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication."

Other identifiers in chapters 17 and 18 have been widely interpreted to indicate that the Vatican is this spiritual whore. This tiny city-state in Rome has diplomatic relations with most of the 200 nations in the world. In claiming to be God's representative on earth it pompously steals a substantial part of the glory due only to Jesus Christ.

Scripture makes it plain that in the end days, there will be a one-world government, religion, and currency. Pope Francis' involvement in pushing toward this eventual end is simply prophecy being fulfilled right before our eyes.

All of these are signs of the budding of the fig tree, speaking more and more clearly that the time is short. See Mark chapter 13.

Bible-believers, we have important work to do before it becomes too late.

Chick tracts go where we can't!

I received a tract (Hi There!) with a tip at a restaurant where I work. I took that tract home, where my kids read it. Due to the questions they asked, I studied it and it touched my soul. I received Christ into my life after years of my rebellion to Him. My wife was also saved, as well as my three children, ages 12, 10 and 8.

climate, education, money, technology, and human rights into the hands of a global body that answers to no one but itself. Argentina's president, Javier Milei, has strongly condemned the pact as an attempt to impose a globalist, socialist agenda that diminishes the autonomy of nations.

For Christians, however, this isn't just a political issue—it's a moral one. As Christians, we are called to respect governing authorities, but we must also draw a line when those authorities issue laws that are in direct conflict with God's Word. If global governance begins to trample on biblical truths, Christians must speak out and stand for what is right.

Vatican Encourages One-World Government

Despite reservations concerning the pact's endorsement of abortion and gender ideology, Cardinal Pietro Parolin, the Vatican Secretary of State, emphasized Vatican support for the broader goals of the pact, such as fostering peace, promoting sustainable development, and addressing existential risks like climate change. His comments reflect the Vatican's ongoing commitment to global governance, which is closely aligned with Pope Francis's vision of a "global juridical, political, and economic order."

Rising Resistance Among Christians

Across the world, there's a growing pushback against the UN's vision. Conservatives, religious leaders, and grassroots movements are warning that the UN's push for global governance is a dangerous overreach. Brett Schaefer, from the Heritage Foundation, argues that the UN is overestimating its ability to solve global crises and pointing to the organization's long track record of failure in fulfilling its original goals—like maintaining peace and protecting human rights.

But for Bible-believing Christians, the issue isn't just about the UN's incompetence—it's about the moral danger of a global system that could force nations to adopt laws contradicting God's design for His creation. Bottom line, the UN's agenda threatens to eliminate any sense of a biblical worldview—and even make it illegal.

We cannot rely on church leaders alone to defend biblical values in a world increasingly hostile to them. Bible-believing Christians must actively engage in the global conversation, pushing back against policies that undermine the sanctity of life, marriage, and religious freedom.

This is a Wake-Up Call We Can't Afford to Miss

In the wake of the UN's "Summit of the Future", it's clear that the stakes couldn't be higher. The UN's global governance plan isn't just political—it's spiritual. Global governance may promise peace, but true peace comes only through obedience to God's Word. If Christians don't act now, we may find ourselves living under a system that forces us to choose between faith and compliance with a morally bankrupt global order.

Everybody can do something. The gospel in a tract can change a heart. Enough changed hearts can change a society. Changed societies can change nations. All because enough people spread the gospel.

with tracts, he plays a crucial role in reaching people with the gospel. Whether you're handing out tracts yourself or sending them to someone who distributes them, you are taking an active role in gospel sharing.

Being a missionary doesn't always mean going somewhere. It could look like making the gospel available to others, whether that's on the streets of your city or through missionaries in need of resources.

Everyone Has a Role in the Great Commission

We're all called to be part of the Great Commission (Matthew 28:18–20). Some go, others send, and some support with prayer, finances, or tracts. As Paul says in 1 Corinthians 3:6, "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase."

When you hand someone a tract, you're planting the seed of the gospel. When you support others who are doing this work, you're helping them plant the seeds and water. And God will bring the increase.

Get Involved, Make an Impact

Tracts are a simple, yet powerful way to reach people with the message of salvation. They can start conversations, spark curiosity, and, most importantly, point people to Christ. When you support missions through the distribution of tracts, you're contributing to the eternal work of the kingdom. Every tract handed out is a step toward fulfilling the Great Commission.

You don't have to travel the world to be a missionary. You can support the work right where you are, simply by handing out tracts or helping others do so. God uses every act of obedience, big or small, to spread His message to the world. Join the mission today and support a missionary by providing tracts for their ministry!

encountering God on a deeper level, and the change is lasting."

A National Movement

Other campuses in the U.S. have seen similar moves of God: Asbury University in Kentucky, Lee University in Tennessee, and Auburn University in Alabama, where spontaneous baptisms and public declarations of faith have become increasingly common. Across the country, students are responding to God's call with repentance, worship, and a passionate hunger for spiritual renewal.

In an era where many students feel disconnected from purpose, identity, and hope, these revivals offer a sanctuary where truth and love in Christ are offered. As author and radio host Michael

Brown recently observed, "God is always working in the hearts of university students." These revival movements are a clear reminder of the power young people have to reshape culture when they allow the Holy Spirit to move in their lives.

A New Generation of Faith

As these revival fires continue to spread, one thing is clear: a new generation of young people is rising up—hungry for truth, healing, and a transformative life with God. In a time when many students are facing unprecedented struggles and questions about their purpose, these events provide a powerful reminder that faith in Jesus Christ provides the answers they've been searching for.

Missions Fund Report

Thailand

Tens of thousands of Chick tracts in Thai and Burmese have been sent to mountainous areas of northwest Thailand, where ministries connected to Missionary Pat Caspary are reaching people who otherwise would never hear the Gospel. See pictures from their ministry below.

In addition, a total of 30,000 Chick tracts in the Karen language have been delivered to those ministering to the refugee Karen people in Thailand. They are a mountain people of Burma, where they are being hunted by the Burmese military. They often have little beyond the clothes on their backs (and their children) so Missionary Pat Caspary arranges relief supplies (food, personal items) to be packaged with Chick tracts for these persecuted people.

Philippines

After being delayed by congestion caused by this year's 6 typhoons, the container of 1,446,000 Chick tracts has finally arrived in Manila, and is being unloaded for inter-island shipment to 89 different ministries.

Ecuador

Missionary Lacy Wheeler has requested 400,000 Spanish Chick tracts for a container headed for Ecuador. The 400,000 Chick tracts will cost the Mission Fund only 7 cents apiece, a total of $28,000. Chick Publications will pay the shipping to Tennessee, where the container is being loaded. This is a great missions value!

Japan

This week we shipped another 10,000 Japanese Chick tracts to Missionary E.G.

in the Tokyo area, the most populated city on the planet. The back of the tracts show a website with a powerful message of hope and a plea to avoid hell. These people need Jesus!

Kenya

Missionary Nathanael Steinbart received 20,000 Chick tracts in Swahili and English for a November outreach and church plant. He writes: "We saw around 600 individual professions of salvation. Each one was personally dealt with by a member of our church here. Now we are using them for our kids clubs. Each weekend we have three Bible clubs. We are passing them out with a wordless book and some biscuits. They will be passed out to a combined total of around 1,600 children. We are praying that God would use these gifts to reach the children and their families. Thank you so much for sending the tracts. They have been and continue to be a huge help for our ministry."

Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I love to give out Chick tracts! I always have a gift to give! I love watching the eyes of people who look at it the first time. I keep my pockets full, car stocked, and hand ready with one for each person I encounter. Praise God for you who scatter these gospel seeds!

But so many who love God and His words, who love the lost, have been hindered by sickness or disability from getting around and “planting seeds” in the hearts of those around them.

Why not supply a missionary? What a gift to supply them with “seed” to sow! And God adds that to your heavenly account, as well! It’s a win-win!

The world is changing, and more doors to reach people with the gospel are opening. What an opportunity! Instead of politics, why not saturate them with the all-consuming love of God! Missionaries are always asking for tracts. We send over a million at a time to the Philippines, divided among over 100 ministries. And they go through them rapidly! Praise God!

Over a billion Chick tracts have seeded the earth, yet that’s only enough for 1/8 of the world’s population. We clearly have so much more work to do.

That’s why it’s so beautiful that things are changing in the world, as we head into 2025. New places may open up. We at Chick are doing what we can to get the gospel out through the Mission Fund, by filling the hands of missionaries on the field, at home or abroad. They get passed around. It is literally a gift that keeps on giving. And it will all be added to your account in heaven.

The harvest is plentiful, and we can supply tools for the laborers!

In Christ Jesus, and for His service,
