

Do the Pope and Bible Believers Really Have That Much in Common?

In the popular Bible study program, The Alpha Course, near the end of the 13th session, video presenter Nicky Gumbel quotes a high Vatican official stating why Christians should work in unity with Roman Catholicism: “What unites us as Christians, right across the denominations, is infinitely greater than what divides us.”

Bible believers, who know the unbiblical teachings of the pope, know that this is a bold lie. Yet, this deception has become a central theme of Rome’s attempt to woo back the “separated brethren,” the unprotesting Billy Graham was one of the first evangelicals who bought into the idea that Roman Catholicism is just another denomination, instead of an unbiblical cult.

Was it ‘Global Warming’ or God’s Warning?

The repeated waves of tornados recently caught many by surprise but caused far fewer deaths than rescuers could believe after surveying the destruction. Unbelievers are quick to blame global warming. But Bible believers who know God’s heart, see a different picture. The continuing chill in relations between the present U.S. administration and Israel is causing increasing concern.

As the recent Chick tract, Somebody Angry?, points out, there are just too many disasters in America happening too close

Tracts Help Missionaries from Jamaica to India

For 20 years, members of Flat Ridge Baptist Church in Cana, Virginia, have been traveling to Jamaica every year, witnessing in churches, the public schools and “on the side of the road.”

“We gave out over two thousand tracts in the schools and saw approximately twelve hundred and fifty respond to God’s word,” writes Pastor Dennis Bledsoe. Using suicide as the topic, they distributed copies of the tract, No Fear. At the Kendall School, the principal was in tears after the presentation. She told Pastor Bledsoe that just last week a third-grade student had told her that he had plans to kill himself. “I know God sent you to us,” she said.

“This was the most blessed trip in the 20 years we have been going to Jamaica,” writes Pastor Bledsoe. Referring to the attached pictures, he says, “You will notice these children were excited to get the tracts and began reading them at once. We encouraged the students to let their family and friends read them also.”

Pastor Bledsoe passed along this statement to those who provided the Chick tracts through the Chick Mission Fund: “The words, ‘thank you’ seem so inadequate to express my appreciation and gratitude for what Chick Publications has done for our Jamaican Mission work this year.”

On the other side of the world, in India, tens of thousands of children were given “Protestants.” After executing tens of millions of “heretics” over several centuries, Catholic leaders decided to change tactics. The Reformation succeeded in putting a spotlight on the atrocities of the Inquisitions. Satan saw that he must change the tactics he was using through this false “church.” When Hitler failed to establish a new Holy Roman Empire, the Vatican came up with the Vatican Ecumenical Council II. This produced the propaganda that Roman Catholicism had somehow changed to become just another Christian denomination with a little different “worship tradition.” Protestants were no longer heretics, but separated brethren; all “Christians” must work together for “peace and justice,” finding common causes such as abortion, poverty, and world hunger. The old

Does Your Bible Have ‘Fairytale Markers’

In Wycliffe’s training of linguists to go to an aboriginal tribe and develop a written language, there is the story about “fairytale markers.” It seems that a group of linguists had labored for years learning the language, developing an alphabet, constructing a grammar, and finally translating the New Testament into the language. Printing preparations were made to produce thousands of copies for distribution.

Somehow it was discovered that this tribal language had a certain style of talking in which everyone knew that the story was not true, but was instead, a “fairytale.”

Unfortunately, this characteristic was not discovered until the entire New Testament was completed, ready for printing. It was written in the style that told the reader that the whole thing was a made-up story.

In English, we have similar “fairytale markers.” A very familiar example is to start a story with the phrase: “Once upon a time....” Immediately, the reader is notified that the following story is a fairytale, not necessarily to be taken as gospel truth. The Wycliffe translators mentioned above had to basically rewrite the New Testament so it would be taken seriously by the tribesmen.

Linguists working on the mission field are not the only ones who run this risk. Linguist and author, David W. Daniels has identified a trend in the modern Bible versions that may, at times, suggest to the reader that the story may be doubted.

A classic example is in the story of Lazarus and the rich man in Luke 16. Jesus spoke this as a true story, not a parable, about a real rich man and a real beggar. Bible dis-believers call this a parable so they can wiggle out of believing in a literal hell. But Jesus said it concerned “a certain” rich man and “a certain” beggar named Lazarus. “A certain” coupled with the beggar’s name, indicates that the story is real. However, in 24 modern bibles, including the English Standard Version (ESV) and the Christian Standard Bible (CSB), “a certain” is omitted. But thirteen other modern versions, including The to major turning points in U.S.-Israeli dealings. In an attempt to spotlight God’s warning about those who fail to bless Israel, Jack Chick included a list of recent “coincidences” that happened in unlikely sequence.

The tract rehearses Israel’s history of persecution since God drove them from the promised land because of their unbelief and rebellion. In the middle ages, the Vatican attempted to wipe them out and gain control of Jerusalem and “God’s land.” For centuries, Jews were forced to live in ghettos, but they always yearned to return to their promised land.

The Bible is very clear about who owns

Jerusalem and the land that God promised to Abraham. God frequently refers to it as “My Land.” Today there is a global conspiracy against Jerusalem by the Vatican, Islam and the United Nations. From the beginning the popes have declared that God is finished with the Jews because they rejected their Messiah. Therefore, they no longer have any right or claim to Jerusalem. The Vatican is pushing to have the city under “international” jurisdiction, presumably by the U.N. This “replacement theology” idea is not just in “church.” Many secularists have suggested that Israel just quietly pick Words, phrases, even whole verses are missing from most modern Bibles.

Are they missing from your Bible?

- What words describing the Trinity are completely removed from most Bibles?
- What verse takes away the Deity of Jesus Christ, by removing a single stroke from one Greek letter?
- What word is left untranslated in crucial places in modern Bibles, because it teaches an “uncomfortable” doctrine?
- How did removing one single word make Jesus into a liar?

This book proves why your Bible needs to be the untainted words of God, not the changing opinions of men. And it shows you, in over 250 verses and in 40 popular Bible versions, what is missing—and where.

So pick up your Bible and let this book help you find out for yourself if something's missing.

Freedom to Sin Replacing Freedom of Religion

When Macy's clerk, Natalie Johnson, discovered a man using the ladies dressing rooms in her clothing department, she politely stopped him. She was rudely told that he considered himself a woman and pointed out Macy's "non-discrimination" policy.

When she insisted, he requested a manager who verified that Macy's did have such a policy that permitted "transgenders" to use any fitting rooms they wished.

Johnson stood her ground, claiming that permitting him in the fitting rooms would violate her religious beliefs. She cited another Macy's policy protecting against religious discrimination. In the altercation, the "transgender" gathered several of his friends and verbally assaulted Johnson with expletives. Ultimately, Johnson was fired for her efforts.

American's freedom of religion is eroding from a number of directions. Schools are discounting grades for students who include biblical words and concepts in their school work or recitals.

The so called "candy cane case" has been submitted to the U.S. Supreme Court after 8 years of tussle in the lower courts. In 2003, third grader Jonathon Morgan attempted to hand out candy cane-shaped pens — with a "religious" message attached— to his classmates. He was stopped by the principal and the parents sued. And the case is still unsettled.

Churches are being denied use of public facilities for worship services. Pastors are forbidden to hold Bible studies in their own homes. Building and use permits are being denied to congregations who, in some cases, have already purchased property. Two main forces are behind most of these attacks: Freedom from religion activists and homosexual militants. The anti-religion drive is not so much against all religions, but specifically against biblical Christianity. Most others: Islam, Catholicism, Buddhism, Hinduism, etc., are tolerated or welcomed into our "multicultural" society. Tolerance applies to everyone but Jesus.

So, how did we get here? Mostly because Bible believers sat back on their "blessed assurance" and let it happen.

Can we fix it? Yes! If we get enough gospel back into the culture.

That's a tall order, given how pervasive sin has become. But we need to fight back every way we can. The current theory is: take the time to make friends with every sinner, then try to coax him to follow Christ.

That's good, but it would be easier if he already knows the way of salvation, and he just hasn't made a decision yet or needs a little tug. A generation ago, that was mostly the case because so many people grew up in Sunday school or were exposed to a higher saturation of the culture with Christian principles.

For a lot of people today, we need to start from the ground up because they have no biblical frame of reference or even have a negative view of Christ and the Bible. Since few are interested in coming to us in our churches, we need to go to them. Christians, however, are too busy to do much of that.

That's where strong, no-nonsense gospel tracts come in. Place a tract with Chick tracts as part of a huge Vacation Bible School effort by missionaries and local churches. Binu Joseph Vadaserikara, Director of Excel Ministries writes that six Excel VBS team members traveled to north Indian villages for VBS and tract distribution.

In the village of Allahabad, more than 300 children participated, most hearing about Jesus for the first time. To help the children think about life after death, the teams used This Was Your Life in the Hindi language as the basis of some of their classes.

In a typical outreach, teams visited 3 schools in 6 villages where about 400 children attended the VBS. All were given tracts and more than 130 students dedicated their lives to Jesus. In all, more than 600 tracts were distributed.

Excel Ministries are expanding their outreach to include 1500 churches. Binu writes: "Need more literature for the VBS season. Thanks for your love and concern."

Besides India and Jamaica, the Chick Mission Fund has been able to help extend the reach of missionaries in countries all over the globe.

If you would like to help a missionary that your church has sent to the field, suggest that he go to www.chick.com and pick out tracts that he would like to use. We will drop-ship to him as many as you are able to purchase. If you cannot find a missionary, we receive requests frequently that we can help you fill. (See information below.)

Message and the Good News Bible (GNB), also add a word that Jesus never said, "once." This results in something like: "Once there was a rich man..." making it just like a child's bedtime story. This seems like a small point, but coupled with Bibles changing "hell" to "hades" and "sheol," it plays right into the hands of those who claim there is no hell.

This is just one of the risks involved in abandoning a word-for-word Bible translation method (literal or functional equivalence) for the more popular thought-for-thought (dynamic equivalence) method used in modern Bible versions.

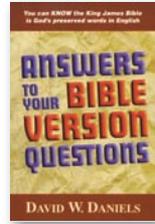

When a preacher has a preserved, literal translation, he has a solid foundation for his sermon, which he can then interpret to suit the level of understanding of his congregation.

Unfortunately, the only Bible widely available today that provides this solid, preserved and literal text is the King

James Version. To one degree or another, all the modern versions have been done "dynamically" where the translators injected their own interpretation into the text. Subtle "fairytale markers" can be the result, as you saw above.

Daniels has expanded this line of thinking about the danger of modern translations in his books, Answers to Your Bible Version Questions, Did the Catholic Church Give Us the Bible?, and Look What's Missing.

Daniels asks, "Who would you rather trust: translators who give you the exact meaning of what God said in the Bible, or those who chose to interpret the meaning through their own belief (or dis-belief) system?"

In the End, the Bible is Always Right

By Thomas F. Heinze

All through history, the Bible has been criticized because it has not gone along with one new theory after another. Over time, the Bible has always been vindicated. The ideas that contradicted it have been found to be wrong and the Bible is proven to actually be the word of God!

The big controversy today is Creation vs. Evolution. The Bible says that God created, but atheists and other evolutionists claim that life was first begun by atoms that moved at random, accidentally forming a first living cell. "It wasn't there; then it was!"

That idea, at one time, seemed possible because people had been taught that the first life was simple, a tradition that started when microscopes were primitive.

People could look at a drop from a mud puddle and see little cells scooting around in the water. These cells, when enlarged a bit by the primitive microscopes of the day, looked simple. Some people thought, "Anything that simple could have begun by accident!" With that ignorance, atheism seemed possible!

But now we have discovered that every single-celled bacterium must accomplish, within it's one cell, the same tasks we accomplish using the trillions of cells in our bodies: eating, digestion, metabolism, waste removal, reproduction—and even thinking—all taking place within a single cell!"

To do all this, even some of the parts of a cell are really complex. There never was a simple cell! One complex cell part is called

DNA. It directs much of what goes on in the cell. DNA is too complex for anyone to really understand, and, unfortunately for the poor atheists, even this single part of a cell is too complex to have formed by accident! But DNA, to do anything at all, depends on other parts of a living cell. By itself it is helpless. RNA, proteins, and little manufacturing and transport machines are among the cell parts that are necessary for DNA to do its work.

Could all these complex cell parts just happen to bump together to form the first life? No! These cell parts only exist where there are living cells to make them!

Even if you have all the parts, as in a dead whatever, (anything from a dead single cell to a dead elephant), no one can make the dead parts live. Life is a deep subject that is still largely unknown.

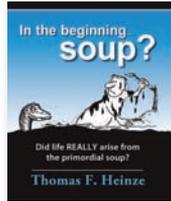

The theory of evolution is often supported by schools and textbooks which claim evolution started with "simple cells" which somehow just popped up and then evolved. Any such statement is obsolete and based on ignorance!

Simple cells don't exist. They have never existed! Modern discoveries have proven that cells can't just pop up on their own. Not even their parts can pop up on their own! In fact, the parts, themselves, are so complicated that scientists can't make them—much less give them life.

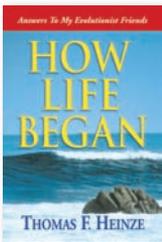

So, it seems obvious that Someone with a better mind than humans must have made them! Living animals and plants up stakes and move to somewhere like Argentina to put an end to the argument over this postage stamp of real estate in the volatile Middle East.

Islam, on the other hand, teaches that whenever any land is ever conquered by Muslims, it forever belongs to Allah. They have succeeded in occupying Jerusalem off and on over the centuries and presently have a key mosque built on the Jewish temple mount. So, their claim to ownership is a major factor in what we call the “Mideast Conflict.”

But, the Bible says the God of Israel has the last say about the land. And history bears this out. God promised that, in the last days, He would gather his people back to His land. Their success, against all odds, in establishing a nation and successfully defending it, fulfills God’s plan.

Meanwhile, those nations that have failed to bless God’s chosen people have suffered His curse. The Vatican’s Holy Roman Empire collapsed. Britain’s global power deteriorated rapidly when they refused to give sanctuary to the Jews fleeing from Hitler’s genocide. Germany was split in two for decades after they attempted to solve the “Jewish problem” by annihilation.

America has enjoyed a couple of centuries of unbelievable blessing and prosperity, particularly in a period after Israel became a nation and we stood solidly behind her. But in the last few years, the U.S. has foolishly come to depend on Israel’s enemies for oil to energize our economy and we increasingly see Israel as just another “Jewish problem” rather than a true friend in a chaotic world.

And again, the land, God’s Land, becomes the issue. Every time we squeeze Israel to give up more “land for peace,” God lifts His hand of blessing and disasters are the result. The tract, Somebody Angry?, details the amazing “coincidences” between our change of attitude and increasing disasters. America beware! Any attempt to trade HIS LAND for peace will only reap a tornado of His wrath.

ideas of the pope being the anti-Christ and Catholics needing to be born again were now obsolete. This new tactic, called "ecumenism," has succeeded in blunting the Protestant efforts at winning Roman Catholics to full assurance of salvation in Christ.

So, why is this Alpha statement a lie? Do Bible believers really have more in common with Roman Catholics than our differences? Author Rick Jones was raised a Roman Catholic and saw firsthand its teachings. In his book, Understanding Roman Catholicism, he examines 37 doctrines held by the pope that directly contradict biblical teachings.

#160 - $11.95

Jones points out at the beginning that Bible believers and Catholicism disagree at the very basic level: what is the final authority for truth. Jones quotes from the official 1994 Catechism of the Catholic Church showing that Roman Catholic Tradition and something called the "Magisterium" stand equal with the Bible in authority. In fact, the Magisterium trumps the Bible because it delegates to the "church" the sole right to interpret the Bible.

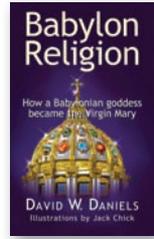

Thus, when Catholics are told it is okay to read the Bible, they are warned that they won't understand it because they need the "church" to explain it to them. For example, where Mark 6:3 speaks of Jesus having brothers and sisters, Rome teaches that these were actually cousins or other relatives because Jesus' mother, Mary, was a perpetual virgin after she gave birth to Jesus. (See also Matt. 13:55 and Galatians 1:19.)

This interpretation is necessary because it would not be appropriate for the Virgin Mary goddess to have born other, normal children. Jones goes on to explain how Roman teaching on salvation is unbiblical since it must come through the "church" and not through Christ alone. And it is not simple salvation by faith, alone, but requires certain good works and rituals.

Couple these with other unbiblical teachings such as purgatory, worship of the wafer god, the pope's priestcraft hierarchy, infant baptism, prayer to saints, bowing to idols, confession to a priest instead of God, forbidding to marry, and vain repetition in prayer, and there is no way that what we agree on is greater than what we disagree on. Let's expose this lie every chance we get. Over a billion precious souls are deceived by this masterpiece of Satan. Chick Publications provides a wide range of tracts and books exposing this prostitute church as the great Whore of Revelation 17 and 18.

We must all be united!

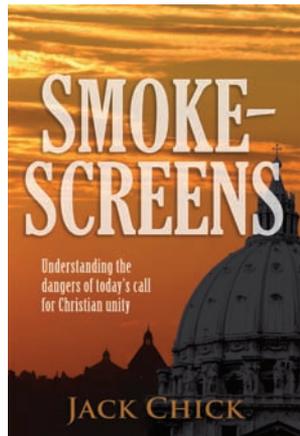

(Under me, of course.)

To be in unity with Rome,
you must be willing to compromise your beliefs . . . and accept hers.

Before you agree to this “unity,” you need to know who you are uniting with—and what they believe.

Here, you will learn that today’s “unity” is a clever smokescreen, devised by the Vatican to bring all Christians under Rome’s control.

And to be in unity with Rome, you must be willing to accept the traditions of men over the words of God.

Truth Compromised is Still a Lie

By David W. Daniels

We hear a lot about Christians “engaging in dialogue” with other groups and religions: Muslims, homosexuals, Catholics, etc. But should a Bible-believer do this? What is this “dialogue” everybody wants us to “engage” in?

When we take a closer look, what they want is not really dialogue—it’s dialectic, a very old Jesuit principle.

Dialectic involves three aspects: thesis, antithesis, and synthesis. These sound complex, but “thesis” and “antithesis” are simply names for two opposites. “Synthesis” is a word for the compromise people reach in order to come to some form of agreement.

Here’s the problem: what if the thesis happens to be the truth? If one side is the truth, then the other side—antithesis—has to be a lie. But what is the synthesis? Any compromise between truth and a lie is also a lie. So, actually, if you talk about which side wins, the lie wins out, because a lie is always a lie. It never becomes the truth. Truth compromised is still a lie.

But before the eyes of God, everyone loses in this kind of dialogue, or dialectic. What we need is truth, not compromise. We need to persuade the other side to the truth of our side. Then everybody wins and there’s no compromise.

Look at the story of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. They’re standing up there by themselves, because everybody else is fallen down on their faces in front of this giant idol. So the king calls them out by name and says in effect, “Didn’t you hear my decree? I don’t care who you are; when you hear the music, you fall down just like everybody else!”

The three could have said, “You know, we could just bow our heads down. That’ll be good enough.” But then they would be just as bad as everybody else. They might as well be on their faces in front of the idol. Tilting your head is still compromise. It’s still not what God commanded in

His word. Instead, they said, “If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not... we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up” (Daniel 3:17-18).

Thesis stayed thesis, and antithesis stayed antithesis. There was no synthesis. In fact, the king in his fury commanded them to heat the fiery furnace seven times hotter, so hot that his mightiest men, who threw them in, died of their burns.

But God protected those three. And even if He hadn’t, they just would’ve gone to meet Him. But this time He came to meet them! And when they came out they didn’t even have the smell of fire—or the stink of idolatry on them. They stayed with their thesis. They had no guilt of compromise. For them there was no synthesis.

It didn’t matter whether they were afraid or not, because that was not the point. It didn’t matter. What mattered was their refusal to compromise. And God completely honored it.

This is why dialogue will never work when you have the truth. Dialogue only works with two people who don’t have the truth. One lie synthesized into another lie comes up with a compromise lie. What’s the difference?

We must stand firm and persuade others of the truth of God’s words and doctrines, perfectly preserved in the King James Bible. We must never compromise His truth with the Devil’s—or man’s—lies.

A MESSAGE FROM JACK CHICK...

Dear Ones in Christ:

Our nation is facing the judgment of God... and it seems nobody believes it's coming, or cares.

The prophets of God were sent to warn Israel and its leaders to repent and turn from their wicked ways. And beloved, when you read the book of Jeremiah, it's exactly like what's going on around us. We all see the handwriting on the wall, but we're told: "Better times are ahead," —especially from politicians running for office. And most people buy into it!

There are no leaders. Every man does that which is right in his own eyes. As the world grows darker and no one seems to have the answers, the antichrist will soon make his move.

The Lord told us in the latter days there would be a falling away. Jesus orders us to preach the gospel to every creature (Mark 16:15). Those of us who have been born again are to be lights in the darkness. Our bodies are the temple of God (1 Cor. 6:19). When we received Jesus as our Saviour, He came to dwell in our bodies.

When you go through the grocery line, does the kid bagging your food know you belong to Jesus? You only have seconds. So give him a tract, and you've shed light into his life. He knows you cared about him. Our neighbors and fellow workers are worried, without hope. If you're afraid, leave a tract in the rest room. God will know you did it for Him. That is how we show we care.

God bless you and give you boldness. Here's your scripture for today, beloved. Look it up: Proverbs 28:1. If you don't... shame on you.

Your brother in Christ,

WE ARE THE GREATEST NATION ON EARTH... AND WE THANK GOD WE'RE NOT LIKE THE OTHERS!

Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing.

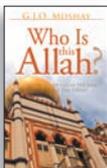

Isaiah 40:15
