

Soaked Eucharist Grows 'Heart Tissue'

Roman Catholic wafer worship took a bizarre turn in Poland recently. In 2008, a consecrated Eucharist (communion wafer) was accidentally dropped on the floor during a Mass. After the wheat wafer is prayed over (consecrated) by an ordained priest, it is believed to be changed into the actual "body, blood, soul, and divinity" of Jesus.

So when this wafer fell, it was a serious

Many Roman Churches provide round-the-clock "adoration" of their wafer-god, displayed in this sunburst "monstrance." The wheat wafer, "consecrated" by an ordained priest becomes the "real presence," the actual "body, blood, soul and divinity" of Jesus. This requires the same leap of the imagination necessary to believe that a carved idol can somehow answer prayer.

Sikh Mission Field —Down My Street?

I first started giving out Chick publications tracts when I was 17 years old. I am 50 now.

Just a week ago we had a Sikh religion parade in our neighborhood with approximately 25,000-30,000 Sikhs walking and watching the parade. When I was notified that the parade was coming down my residential street I was at first angry that thousands of people would cause a safety hazard and the fact that a false religion with a false god was being celebrated

Muddled Bibles Make Shallow Christians

By David W. Daniels

Christian pollster, George Barna, lists several reasons why young Christians leave the church. They claim it is “over-protective,” “antagonistic to science,” “simplistic” and “judgmental” on sexuality, “too intolerant of other religions,” and “unfriendly to doubters.”

Barna calls this “shallow” Christianity. Others call it “the new normal.” The “seeker friendly,” “emergent” churches today have largely failed to emphasize the need for total personal commitment to Christ or lay a solid biblical foundation in the lives of these young people.

Barna’s “reasons” suggest that they may be simply looking for a church to suit their sin. Such a church will always promote a Bible changed by man that downplays their sin. How can the life they are building be strong if they don’t lay the right foundation (Heb. 6:1-2; 1 Cor. 3:11-15)?

But the Bible is not like any other book. It’s the only place we can find the exact words of God! I don’t want people to take out God’s words and insert their own opinions. I want to wrestle with what God actually said, aided by the Holy Ghost, as I seek the Lord (Prov. 28:5). And I never want a Bible so vague that it will let me read my own beliefs into the wording.

In the last 30+ years of studying Bible and linguistics, I’ve seen people justify their own ideas by saying, “The Hebrew really means...” or “The Greek might say,” when it says no such thing. They’re just pretending there’s some secret nugget you have to find in the Greek or Hebrew, or the Bible won’t be clear to you.

But I’ve got good news. If you get God’s words accurately translated, with formal equivalence (what God said, not what men think He meant), you’ll understand the holy text better than all these so-called scholars combined. Let’s face it: reading multiple commentaries and quoting other versions simply muddle the message.

Anyone who depends on that for his or her spiritual life will come up just as shallow as the young people Barna described.

Fifty-plus men spent seven years carefully compiling, translating and checking the King James Bible. The king had them picked from among the world’s leading authorities in both the Bible and its lan-event. There “Jesus” was, lying helpless on the floor. Obviously, one cannot just pick him up and go on by inserting him into someone’s mouth. That would be unsanitary. On the other hand, this was “God” there on the floor.

Official procedure varies about what to do next. Some suggest that a priest should, indeed, pick him up and eat him. Another approach is to pick him up and save him somewhere until after Mass and then wash him down a special sink that drains directly into the ground instead of the common sewer.

However, if a crumb (or several) is visible on the floor after retrieving it, a linen cloth is to be placed over the spot and then the place is to be washed after Mass. In the case in Poland, another procedure was followed. The wafer was placed in water to dissolve it. However, a

Why Care About the Jesuits?

With today's focus on Islam, the attention is off the maneuverings of the Pope. Yet, behind the scenes, the Jesuit order has not slackened its pace. A new Crusaders Comic by Chick Publications reminds us that this powerful servant of the Whore of Babylon is still quietly placing members in the world's power centers.

Since Loyola established the Jesuit Order, it has been the most powerful instrument of the Vatican in world affairs. Notice how often prominent leaders rise to power after attending Jesuit universities such as Georgetown and University of San Francisco.

One little-known fact is that few Jesuits actually become priests. Jesuit universities claim millions of graduates, yet only about two percent of them ever wear a priestly robe. Instead, many go on to positions in the political and business world where they quietly influence key legislation or policy decisions. Pope Benedict XVI's decisions about evolution were fronted by a Jesuit. President Clinton openly touted being surrounded by, and even preferring, Jesuits in a speech he made at Georgetown University.

When Governor Paterson of New York was under the cloud of scandal, it was his Jesuit assistant who rose to take control. The present Governor Jerry Brown of California trained for at least a while to be a Jesuit priest. At one of President G. W. Bush's high level meetings, someone remarked that only Bush and one other in the room were not Roman Catholic. The present U.S. Supreme Court contains six Roman Catholic and three Jewish justices.

Jesuit university web sites claim that their graduates are involved in world affairs at every level. Based on history, there is no reason to disagree with them. For centuries, in dozens of countries, Jesuit "missionaries" succeeded in worming their way into high government levels. But when it was discovered that their goal was to bring the country under the control of the pope, they were summarily expelled.

Posing as Christians, early Jesuit missionaries brought their false gospel to China, Japan and other countries in the

Tract Tip: Heard at a Restaurant

"Do you have a new one? I like these. We all read them!" Our server's smile was genuine, not just to get a good tip. It was our favorite restaurant and it was obvious we were favorite customers.

Bible believers should be in that class. What did Jesus say would be the distinctive mark of one of His disciples? It is that "ye have love one to another." (See John 13:35.) When you leave a good tip and a tract at a restaurant, you don't just reach one person; it will be shared with the entire staff. Restaurant staffs are usually close-knit groups, working together in admirable harmony to make your dining experience superior to that of the very stiff competition. Whenever a tract is dropped into that environment, it usually gets circulated until everyone gets the message. Servers in general are to be admired for their ability to stay warm and friendly in the face of sometimes cold and demanding customers.

When a believer shows some interest in

It ends with a no-compromise Gospel message.

Creation or Evolution?

Evidence from Design

By Thomas Heinze

We generally recognize something that has been designed by a smart designer when we see it. A car, for example, does not have to be a factory-fresh Ferrari for you to recognize that it was designed. You will even recognize an old wrecked Ford abandoned at the side of the road as something that was designed and built. Even if it's rusty!

If, one night, someone should drive up with his pickup and steal the motor, the transmission and all the tires of the wrecked Ford, you still recognize what's left as having been designed. Some things can form by accident and others can't!

Think of ants for a moment. Ants go far, far back in the evolutionist's dating system, but those who see their fossils know that those ancient ants were really ants because they look like ants.

Now let's jump from ants to bacteria. When we try to think of a living thing that is very small and simple, bacteria come to mind because atheists often suggest that other living things evolved from bacteria. Where did bacteria come from? My answer is that God created living things and bacteria were among the things He created. The evolutionist is caught between a rock and a hard place when he tries to account for bacteria or anything else that he might want to claim came first.

I call now on my friends who are evolutionists! Trace or imagine life's genealogy back as far as you can. Unless at some point you admit some kind of intelligent design and creation, you are stuck with the idea that the first living thing, bacterium or whatever, was not formed by God, but by the random movements of atoms and molecules. They would have to have come together by accident and made a living thing already perfect enough to be able to function.

Back when evolutionists were deciding that we came from bacteria, they thought bacteria were simple. "They were small weren't they?" Examining them under the microscopes of those days, they were little blobs moving aimlessly around in stagnant water. Placing them under today's powerful microscopes exposes the fact that the claim that bacteria are simple came from a previous generation's ignorance. They are far too complex to have popped up without a very intelligent creator.

Open your eyes! The DNA in bacteria comes already programmed to reproduce other bacteria. Why would an accident have gone to the extra work of producing bacteria that could reproduce? That ability requires additional complex equipment.

Push an evolutionist back far enough and he must either admit that he is stumped, or back into some sort of creationist position. There is no decent atheistic answer to the question: "What did the first living things evolve from?"

I am sure some of you, my friends, will show this to your favorite atheists. If you are one of the lucky atheists who receive it, in my neighborhood. I took my anger and frustration to prayer and asked our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, to help me be a good ambassador for Him. My thoughts soon turned to, "Okay God, how can I reach out to these lost souls and let them know You are the only true God and show them that You died on the cross for them also?"

The next thought in my mind was, "I can reach out to these lost souls by giving them a tract in the Hindi language, telling them about the real God, Jesus Christ." I ordered the only tract that Chick Publications had in the Hindi language: This Was Your Life.

On the morning of the parade I was up and out the door at 6:30 am walking the route of the parade that did not start until 10. I and my German shepherd, Gabriel, had a great walk on that sunny Sunday morning.

As we were walking the parade route I was leaving all 50 of the tracts in locations where a person would see them and be tempted to pick up the little tract in their language. I taped the tracts to the bottom of street signs, stop signs, fire hydrants, retaining walls, fences and on posts at intersection crossings.

I then prayed that the Holy Spirit would draw people to pick up the tracts and would work in their hearts, minds and souls as they read the tracts.

Before Gabriel and I were home, I noticed an elderly Sikh couple out for an early morning walk. As the couple stopped at the intersection, the elderly woman saw the tract and picked it up. I watched from a distance as I saw her start to read the tract. Soon her husband was also reading the tract.

They then continued on their walk taking the tract with them. As I watched, my heart was flooded with love and joy for this couple. I knew the Holy Spirit would be witnessing to their hearts that day.

When Gabriel and I got home, I decided that next year we would do the exact same thing, but with way more than just 50 tracts. So if you ask me, "Should we still give out tracts?" My answer is definitely YES! Sometimes God does not send us out to the mission field, but instead brings the mission field to our homes. If you win one soul for Jesus, the effort is worth it.

I will not know the full results of my effort that Sunday morning until I am in heaven with Jesus, but in the meantime I am going to be giving out more and more tracts and praying for God's miracles to work in people's lives who read them.

Thank you for the tracts from Chick Publications and thank you to all those that work at Chick Publications for reaching out to the World with Jesus' Love. God Bless all of You.

orient. When their political machinations were discovered, they were sent packing. However, now all “Christians” are lumped together in the oriental mind, making it very difficult for true Bible believers to enter with the truth.

The pervasiveness of the Jesuit influence is largely responsible for the change in attitude of Protestants toward the Pope. The leaders of the reformation accurately targeted the pope as the anti-Christ, and the Vatican as the prostitute church of Revelation 17 and 18.

When Rome failed to stamp out the Reformation by burning its leaders at the stake, she switched tactics. And the new strategy, ecumenism, has worked wonders. Few Protestants, even evangelicals, are willing to call Catholicism a cult. With Jesuit help, she has succeeded in positioning herself as “just another denomination with a different worship tradition.” Never mind that she preaches “another gospel,” worships a wafer god, and prays to a goddess instead of Jesus.

This latest Crusaders Comic, called simply Jesuits, joins a full array of Chick publications detailing this deceptive new strategy by the pope and his highly effective troopers. The Secret History of the Jesuits, by Edmond Paris gives hundreds of examples of Jesuit intrigue in history up through World War II. The Alberto Rivera series of Crusaders Comics describes the global tentacles of the pope’s reach.

All this background information is important for the soul winner who has the opportunity to lead a deceived soul out of this bondage to pagan rituals. Rather than accepting them as brothers and sisters in Christ, we must warn them of God’s wrath to come on this false “church.”

few days later, it was still somewhat intact and a red spot had appeared on it. This caused a stir among the faithful, and two doctors were asked to examine the spot. Low and behold, they claimed their tests indicated heart muscle tissue! Since the wafer had been made into "Jesus," then the tissue must be Jesus' own heart.

This "miracle" required a special celebration. The Associated Press reported that: "The dark-spotted wafer was carried aloft in a reliquary by a golden-robed priest in a procession and was put on display in the town's church of St. Anthony as about 1,000 faithful looked on, according to a report and footage carried by the TV station TVN." Subsequent Masses were held to further honor the miracle.

This modern news item refutes the claim that Roman Catholicism has renounced its idolatry and now should be welcomed into the fellowship of believers.

Converted Priest, Charles Chiniquy, in his book, 50 Years in the "Church" of Rome, describes how other types of mishaps with this wafer-god led to great consternation by the "faithful."

Once, when a fellow priest was carrying a consecrated wafer in its special container to deliver it to an ill parishioner, he got in a fight during a snow storm with a protestant who refused to drive his horses into the ditch and allow the priest carrying the "good god" to pass. The wafer in its container ended up in a snow drift and was not found until the spring thaw. In fact, it was never found, since it had melted away inside the box.

Another time, a misplaced wafer box was found by a curious child who opened it, dropping the wafer into a chamber pot. Chiniquy's description of the agony of guilt of the child's family is heart wrenching.

Rome's perversion of the last supper ordinance illustrates why the Reformers called Roman Catholics "idol worshippers." The unbiblical practice of claiming the consecrated wafer to be Jesus Himself and then eating him as a "re-sacrifice" for sin, is pagan idolatry at its finest.

Chiniquy provides one of the most convincing contrasts between Rome's unscriptural traditions of men and the pure, biblical, commandments. (See Matt. 15:3.) Chiniquy's journey from a faithful, but deceived, Vatican priest, to glorious freedom in Christ is a powerful story highly useful in helping other Roman Catholics escape from bondage to the pope.

The fact that there is no reasonable atheistic answer is so completely true that it has become a law of science.

"Life always comes from life!" Living things are so awesomely complex that only God could have created them. The reason atheists who believe in evolution won't recognize this is that they still have faith in stupid old myths and legends about "simple cells" that were debunked years ago. guages. Some were fluent in as many as a dozen languages. Each verse was reviewed 14 times by all these men before it was cleared to print.

On top of that, every expert in the land was openly invited to view the process and contribute his understanding. It was an unprecedented event in human history. And God Himself put his seal of approval on the KJV by using it as the foundational truth for 400 years of revivals and missionary movements that produced the most free and prosperous nations the world has ever seen.

There are only about 600 words in the KJV that are not familiar to the average, literate English speaker. Which is easier: to learn the meaning of a few words at a time as you read, believe and put into practice what God said? Or would you rather spend years muddling around in Greek and Hebrew, wasting precious time, when we should be laying a solid foundation of truth in the lives of the next generation? That's exactly what Peter was referring to in 2 Peter 3:16: unstable people wresting the scriptures "unto their own destruction."

The church's failure to preach and teach this "sure Word" has created a generation of "shallow" young Christians unable to resist the powerful, sweet, lies Satan feeds them at every turn.

New Spanish Bible Based on Trustworthy Texts

Another aspect of “the mission field coming to us,” is the burgeoning Spanish-speaking population in the U.S. Nationwide, 50 million residents are classified by the Census Bureau as Hispanic. This is a larger mission field than many foreign countries. Few soul winners go out with tracts in their pocket without including some Spanish language tracts.

But once you lead someone to the Lord with a Spanish tract, which Bible do you give them? For years, Chick Publications shared this quandary in deciding which Spanish Bible to quote in Spanish translations of the tracts.

This issue grew as we became more aware of the problems with the modern English Bibles. When we began to find scores of changed words, as well as phrases and whole verses missing from many Bibles, we came to realize that the only complete Word of God in English was the one from the Textus Receptus stream of manuscripts, the King James Version.*

As we shared our concern that the newest Spanish Bibles were following the Alexandrian stream of polluted manuscripts and modern re-interpretations of scripture, some Latin American missionaries suggested we look at a new version in the works that promised to return to the Textus Receptus base and the historical meanings of words. We discovered that the project was being coordinated by a Mexican pastor and church planter, Humberto Gomez. He had become aware of some of the deficiencies in the popular Reina-Valera Bibles when a friend showed him how important words and meanings were changed from historically approved Bibles, including the original Valera Bible. Curious, he began compiling a list of these changes. As his list grew, he invited fellow missionaries and pastors to assist in his research. Using the internet, they began to share their findings and glean input from a wider and wider circle of associates. Eventually, well-known linguists and Bible scholars began joining the project. They decided not to try to produce a completely new version, but to use the 1909 Antigua Reina-Valera as their base text for correction.

Finally, in 2004, they put together a working copy, called it the Reina-Valera Gomez, and published it, inviting further reviews and/or criticisms. Of course, criticisms were loud and sometimes unkind but Gomez carefully considered each one, sorting out the legitimate concerns from the carping.

For another five years, he and his internet team across 13 countries continued to refine the text, not only for accuracy, but carefully preserving the unique beauty of the Spanish language.

Not until 2010 did they feel that they could release a final text for regular publication. The result is the RVG 2010, printed and distributed by several publishers. Chick Publications chose to

Many times you will find that the source of their smile goes beyond the desire for a good tip, but is backed up with their own faith in Christ and the resultant "joy of the Lord." If this is the case, they

Dr. Gomez is to be commended for patiently enduring the darts of criticism and persevering in giving to the Spanish-speaking world a complete Bible that can be fully trusted to be the faithful Words of God.

A MESSAGE FROM JACK CHICK...

Dear ones in Christ,

My spirit is concerned about the black children of Africa who have lost their parents to AIDS. My dear friends, Bill Eubanks and his wife Janet, have been reaching thousands in Zimbabwe with our black character tracts made by Fred Carter. He is a black pastor who created about 95 percent of the art used in our film, Light of the World. Fred is so humble as a pastor that some of his congregation tell me he's more like Jesus than anyone they know. We are in the process of converting 15 of our tracts to black art characters. Several are already done. Your Big Moment, is a This Was Your Life redrawn for black ladies and is now available. Fred is working on the others.

Here is a tip on passing out black art tracts. Tell people that a black brother made them. That seems to help get them accepted. His art is beautiful. In Africa, these tracts are like $20 bills. When someone begins to pass out the tracts on the streets, they are quickly swamped with reaching hands.

Pray for Bill and Janet. In Zimbabwe, they pass out tracts while speaking in schools and prisons. They show the Light of the World video every night in villages. Hundreds commit their lives to Christ and are guided to local churches. This year, they were not allowed into the country because of elections. Next year, they plan two trips. 200,000 tracts were sent in this year and are waiting.

Another dear friend, Tim Berends, passes out 300 tracts a day. He went into a very tough neighborhood in St. Louis wearing his "I-Love-Muslims" T-shirt. Many there were Black Muslims. Every single person took a tract. When we are out witnessing, we should always carry Spanish language and black character tracts. Our job is to reach every precious soul.

Yours for the lost,

P.S. We maintain a Mission's Fund to supply tracts to missionaries as money is available. If you wish to help extend the reach of these front-line soldiers, you may designate your gift to the Chick Mission's Fund. Although we cannot provide a tax-deductible receipt, 100 percent of all donations go to supply tracts to missionaries.
