Good old “family friendly” Disney has added Satanism to its now infamous promotion of sexual perversion. The in-your-face title, “Little Demon,” leaves little question about the content. One organization of activists for decency, onemillionmoms.com (IMM), describes the show as TVMA (Mature Audiences Only) and that it contains frontal nudity and occult themes and rituals.

Disney describes the storyline as follows:

“Thirteen years after being impregnated by Satan, a reluctant mother and her Antichrist daughter attempt to live an ordinary life.” Satan is portrayed as “an average, middle-aged, cardigan-wearing suburban dad,” according to IMM. “The trailer is filled with satanic imagery, animated gore, and graphic violence, such as beheaded chickens, pentagrams, dismembered bodies, and melting human flesh.”

California Establishes ‘Hate’ Commission

California governor Gavin Newsom has appointed five members to a new “Commission of the State of Hate” tasked with the responsibility of reviewing hate crime data and making policy recommendations related to civil rights. It will also provide resources for victims.

The commission is established primarily to focus on hate crimes, yet it is tasked with investigation of all forms of hate and to monitor and assess trends relative to the state of hate or hate-related crime. Periodic reports are to be made to the Department of Justice, the attorney general, and federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies.

The word “hate” has a long history. When Chick Publications began exposing the unbiblical pagan practices of Roman Catholicism in the 1970s and 80s, priests and

The program is available on FX, and joins other dark Disney-associated productions “Maleficent,” “Star vs. The Forces of Evil” and “The Owl House.” IMM believes that their objections to The Owl House had some influence toward the planned discontinuation of the series.

A story in the Christian Post recently illustrated the danger of this kind of exposure for children. Jenn Nizza believed that she had a special gift to help people with spiritualist counselling. She “spent years doing readings and communicating with what she believed were the dead loved ones of her clients.”

Early in life, her family exposed her to discussions of paranormal activity. She had her first tarot card reading at the age of 13. About the same time, she remembers having dreams that essentially came true. This led to the belief that she had a special gift. She proceeded into numerology and astrology and started doing readings for friends and family, and later clients.

In the New Age scene, she truly believed that she was helping people. When a demon would come up impersonating a grandmother for one of her clients she shared in their tears of joy. She says she saw herself helping people as a “servant of righteousness,” but now realizes that it was a demonic masquerade.

As Nizza reached mid-life, rather than a fulfilled feeling of accomplishment, she began to experience depression and an eating disorder. “If you go down the wrong road — it just takes one tarot card reader on TikTok, one person in the new age, one ‘love and lighter’ [teacher] to tell you that you are gifted,” she said. “And you are going to go down the rabbit hole of destruction.”

Fortunately, along the way she had

Should Christians Scorn the Bible?

Satan has found a very sneaky way to get some believers to join him in disparaging God’s words. It centers around a growing “disaffection” with the Authorized King James Version. It occasionally shows up in conversation about the “KJO” (King James Only) movement, a term not usually complimentary.

How Satan got his foot in this back door is an intriguing story. It goes back to a time in the 1700s when questions arose concerning the language of the King James Bible. Some maintained that the language was obsolete and needed to be “updated.”

Of course, any time someone suggests the possibility of changing God’s words, loud alerts go off in the control room of hell, announcing the opportunity.

Undercover agents soon infiltrated the Bible societies that were assembled for the purpose. The grand plan was to sideline the many foundational documents leading up to the KJV that had been collected since the second century.

One of the key figures responsible for these early documents was Erasmus, who compiled a Greek New Testament which became known as the Textus Receptus. This was the target that had to be taken out if Satan’s plan would succeed.

In the scramble to find a replacement for the Textus Receptus, two documents surfaced that had very little or no history. One was in the Vatican library, where it was first catalogued in the late 15th century. The other appeared out of nowhere in the 1840s in a monastery on the Sinai Peninsula.

The two manuscripts, the Vaticanus and Sinaiticus, were chosen by “scholars” Brooke F. Westcott and Fenton J.A. Hort as the primary basis of a new Greek New Testament to be used in place of the Textus Receptus documents to update the KJV.

However, these manuscripts contained errors and omissions, differing ecumenicists immediately branded it as “hate literature.”

Later, when we published tracts explaining God’s abhorrence of homosexual behavior, “hate” was the accusation that burned the ears of our customer service phone ladies.

While the California Commission was formed primarily to track hate crimes, it is a small step from that to “hate speech.” Countries without America’s constitutionally guaranteed free speech have succeeded in prosecuting Christians based on speech that they objected to.

Many years ago, Canada censored some verses in the Bible that James Dobson of the radio program Focus on the Family was using in his broadcasts. Street preachers in England have recently been charged with speech that offended some listeners.

Several European countries have passed laws against hate speech. Finland recently indicted one of their members of parliament for quoting scriptures against homosexuality.

The Scottish Parliament recently approved a hate crime bill that included the offense of “stirring up hatred.” The objection was raised that it did not contain a “dwelling defense.” Without it, there was a concern that if neighbors held a conversation and someone expressed a viewpoint against transgender rights or homosexuality, it could trigger a police investigation.

California’s Commission is the first of its kind in the U.S. and the saying is: “as California goes, so goes the nation.” An example of that is in Virginia. When

‘Banned Books Week’ Celebrates Perversion

For K-12 schools and city libraries, September 18-24 was celebrated as “Banned Books Week.” And why the festivities? The answer is complicated. It tells us a lot when we look to see who is behind the celebration. Wikipedia explains:

Banned Books Week is an annual awareness campaign promoted by the American Library Association and Amnesty International, that celebrates the freedom to read, draws attention to banned and challenged books, and highlights persecuted individuals.

NOTE: This American library Association is the same that recently elected a Marxist lesbian as president. (See Battle Cry July/August 2022 issue.)

All over the country, parents are challenging city and school libraries over books that could get you arrested if you read them aloud on a street corner. Library directors and associations are fighting back with cries of censorship and celebration of banned books.

So, how did we get to the place where a library could become a battleground? It basically comes down to the definition of free speech. One side defines it as, “anything goes at any age.” The other side is willing to concede age-grading for some material, but see other copy as too raw for any age.

They agree with St. Paul: “For it is a shame to even speak of those things which are done of them in secret,” (Eph. 5:12). When a parent dared to read one book in a school board meeting, they quickly shut down his microphone fearing that the video streaming of the public meeting would get someone arrested.

So, why are library officials so bold in standing against common decency? Or parents seemingly stymied in their attempt to clean up the libraries? Basically, it comes down to a struggle over the Free Speech Amendment of the

Finally —the Right Questions

Senator Mike Lee is joining a chorus of other leaders beginning to ask the right questions about the massacres of innocent people: “Why is our culture suddenly producing so many young men who want to murder innocent people? Could fatherlessness, the breakdown of families, isolation from civil society, or the glorification of violence be contributing factors?”

Of course, these are only symptoms of the most basic of causes, loss of fellowship with our Creator. But this disconnect has some very specific features that could be corrected if there was a will. Lynne Marie Kohm, family law professor at Regent University, lays out five factors for us to consider:

1. Very little parental involvement.

Kohm points to the fact that these boys had little attention from their parents, particularly fathers. Statistics indicate that over 70 percent of the recent shooters were from fatherless homes. They were not involved with the boys in sports, schoolwork, church, or other activities. “Just not involved in the child’s life,” she says. The child learns to distrust the parents and guidance is lost.

2. Some kind of stress on the child.

In a stress-filled world, children are not equipped to handle social conflicts like bullying, teasing and the cruelty of other children —or even adults. Techniques of managing it must come from good parenting.

3. A whole lot of time alone.

With the whole society basically shut down for the last two years, this has been a challenge even for good parents. Single mothers with rambunctious boys are at a serious disadvantage. The fallback position has been to video games, TV, and social media, creating an atmosphere of radical ideologies and sinful suggestions. Even church no longer plays a significant role in most families. Up until the last couple of generations, society generally worked with parents to raise good citizens and responsible adults.

4. Loss of a sense of truth and morality.

The culture, and often the schools, promote the idea that everyone can have their own truth. Evolution has become the national religion, eliminating all accountability to God or His Truth. This becomes a wide-open door for Satan to marinate the culture with his lies. Since death is his goal, Uvalde is his delight. Of course this leads to an...

5. Incredible lack of remorse.

1 Timothy 4:2 speaks of those whose conscience is “seared with a hot iron.” While there is some debate about the nature of our conscience, there is no doubt that it is influenced by our early life. And only a well-functioning family can provide the best influence in the formation of a conscience. The men involved in these massacres uniformly displayed little remorse.

These five factors demonstrate how far we have strayed from God’s plan.

In several places where the Old Testament prophets pronounce judgement on Israel for their sin, they describe a combination of sword, famine, and pestilence. But these did not come without warning. Years earlier, lonely voices would raise a concern of the direction the culture was taking.

Can we, today, afford to ignore this same warning? The sword was a very effective instrument of war in that day. Today, the power of our instruments of war is beyond comprehension, as the pictures of the splintered cities in Ukraine graphically testify.

Some are claiming that global famine is on its way. And the COVID-19 season we are in certainly qualifies as a pestilence.

Now, more than ever, God’s people need to speak up for God’s way. Many are attempting to do that. We need to join them, and no-nonsense gospel tracts are a powerful way to do it.

Banned From p.4

U.S. Constitution. Original framers of the constitution relied on a virtuous people who would understand that freedom of speech had its limits. Pornography and transgender propaganda exceeds those limits just as shouting fire in a crowded theater does. Now we are in a situation where that freedom is abused to promote perversion and destroy the innocence of our children.

Indeed, laws have been passed that open a wide door for libraries and classrooms to freely expose students to outrageous evil. Over the years, laws were enacted to protect materials in libraries that were acceptable educational and artistic expressions. Forty states now have these “obscenity exemptions.” Again, it depended on a virtuous people handling even this material discreetly.

Always quick to take advantage of an opportunity, homosexual activists have used this exemption to push perversion all the way down to the kindergarten level. Some of the fruits of their efforts are showing up in the spread in society of gender confusion among even elementary school children. This has been rightly identified as a “grooming” effort to prepare a new generation for approval and promotion of the homosexual lifestyle.

Parents who are trying to counter this evil by replacing elected school boards find an entrenched bureaucracy at the heart of their public school system. Their efforts are blindsided by foot dragging, doubletalk, and sometimes outright hostility. Some even find that the courts are slanted against them.

As Bible believers we recognize that loss of virtue is at the heart of so many of our problems today. If we are to preserve these freedoms, gifted to us so wisely by America’s founding fathers, we must do everything we can to show that God has a better way.

Gospel tracts can be a powerful way to saturate a neighborhood or community with God’s plan. No matter what the devil chooses to celebrate, it’s always the right time to spread the good news.

Chick Mail Bag

From time-to-time, we go to the McDonald’s here in Munich to eat. There we have countless witnessing opportunities.

I ordered some food while my wife Sandy was talking to the neighbor next to her table. The lady said, “I have been watching you every time you are here.” I handed her a Gospel tract called The Present.

She said, “I’ve seen this tract before! I love Jesus just like you. Here is how I found Jesus as my Savior.

“I was at McDonald’s here in Munich, and a Chinese lady talked to me about getting saved. I told her “not now.” My job then moved me to Hamburg, Germany, which is 600 miles away. There I went to McDonald’s, and I could not believe it. This same Chinese lady was there, too!

“My thought was that this lady is following me.

“Well, I finally realized our wonderful Lord in heaven wanted me to be saved. This Chinese lady helped me again and showed me that we are all sinners; that we need to confess our sins and ask Christ Jesus to be our Savior. So, that is what I did!”

She added, “I am learning more and more about the importance of being a faithful witness for my Savior!”

Wilhelm F. –Germany

significantly from the Textus Receptus. But Satan's undercover agents succeeded in persuading the Bible societies that these documents, without provable history, were indeed very early manuscripts.

A revision committee was formed that produced a new English New Testament that not only updated the language but changed the text in significant places. It became known as the 1881 Revised Version (RV).

There were a lot of crosswinds and developments during the 19th century. Charles Darwin and company were major players in the growing field of science. Industrialization brought inexpensive printing. Increased communication media allowed advertisers to present these printed books to a wide market. Many publishing houses prepared different study Bibles, using the new revised Greek created by Westcott and Hort.

But the stubborn King James version continued to be wildly popular. Even so, modern marketing strategies are very effective when applied to promoting a favored product —or skewering a competitor. Today, this tendency to scorn the King James testifies to the effectiveness of the negative PR campaign mounted against it.

In summary, God gave the English world the Bible in a classic, timeless language. Its text rests on a solid foundation of over 5000 manuscripts carefully preserved and copied for over 20 centuries. But Satan and his minions are in the shadows, high-fiving each other over their success. Most churches now use a muddle of Bibles, based on a few defective manuscripts.

Can God be pleased when we dare to even border on scorning the Bible that proved its power during 400 years of the greatest expansion of the Kingdom of God in history?

Author David W. Daniels has spent over 20 years researching this intriguing story of Satan's monstrous plot against God's words. The details are in over a dozen books that he has written and are available from Chick Publications.

Hate From p.4

a conservative government was recently elected, they found an ordinance on the books that specifically stated that Virginia must follow California rules concerning elimination of vehicles burning fossil fuels.

We are certainly quite aware how much influence the California entertainment industry has upon the rest of the country.

Another side to this is also worrisome. One of the members appointed to the Commission has previously worked for the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC). This organization maintains a "hate map" that pinpoints over 700 organizations in the US that they consider purveyors of hate.

You can see from the screen capture on the next page why Chick Publications has reason to be concerned. Mainstream news organizations and government agencies regularly refer to the SPLC as a reliable source. (See <https://www.splcenter.org/hate-map>.)

So far, America has benefited from the constitutional guarantee of free speech and the freedom of religion. However, those are both under attack now by an increasingly godless culture. While we still have that umbrella of protection, we need to be focusing on the Great Commission like never before.

Mark 16:15 says for us to go and preach. Few of us have the gift to stand and preach God's word. But we can all put little paper gospel preachers in the hands of those we meet from day-to-day. It only takes a few seconds, but it can make the difference in someone's eternity.

Missions Fund Report

IRELAND

As he has done for the last 25 years, Missionary Nico Verhoef took 14 men from different countries on the European continent with him on a missions & street preaching tour this year through Ulster and Northern Ireland. It is an excellent way of training young men for the ministry. Armed with thousands of Chick tracts you provided, they preached in all the big cities there.

He wrote: “Over ten thousand Chick tracts were distributed. We preached the gospel of the grace of God in Dublin, Belfast, Galway, Ennis, Limerick, Cork and Waterford and visited a few indigenous churches where we ministered the word of God. The country needs public preaching more than anything else. Very few, if any, pastors are preaching anything in public... Eighteen souls got saved.”

He said, “Of course, we had a regular amount of trouble with the police, the hecklers, the drunks and the druggies, but nothing unusual. Pray for more laborers on this beautiful but spiritually dark island.”

GREENLAND

For several years, the Mission Fund has been providing thousands of Chick tracts to Missionary Chris Shull. He writes: “One of our favorite stories is about a Chick tract that we gave to a lady here in town walking down the street. We did not hear from her for almost a year later when she called and asked if she could come to the Baptist Church (our church). She said that she still had her ‘ticket.’ :-). She has been saved and attending ever since.”

We also have a boat ministry where we distribute these tracts in small remote villages and towns. Currently, our boat is out of commission and we are praying about a smaller, yet faster new boat (to reach) these small remote places in Greenland. We just visited a small town north of us by helicopter. We took along many Chick tracts and distributed them there.”

UNITED KINGDOM

Cross Mission in the United Kingdom works with evangelists like Paul Song to reach many nationalities in the U.K. Immigration has filled this country with Muslims. Song writes that Chick tracts are so powerful that some Muslims gave their lives to Jesus through the tracts. He requested another 40,000 tracts, and thanks to your giving, we were able to supply them.

Kristina Kim, another Cross Mission street worker who gives out Chick tracts daily, wrote, “Yesterday, I met many young guys who opened up their hearts to the Gospel!” Britain, as a nation, may have abandoned the Gospel, but there are still many people who are looking for hope.

In July of 2022, he conducted a “Sports Bible Camp” in which youth enjoyed a combination of Bible teaching and sports competitions. Over 60 young people attended, ages 12-14. They each received a copy of the Chick tract “Iyan ang Batas” (It’s The Law in Filipino). The tract was the theme of the camp and all gospel messages presented as Bible teaching, skits, small group sessions and memory verses.

The tracts found their way throughout the village, where people of all ages read the simple gospel.

Missionary Todd Eklund and his wife Yola have discipled a believer named Paola, whose mother lives in a lawless region of Mexico. We will let Eklund tell her story in his own words: “A couple years ago Paola obtained new employment here in Mexico City as a cook, now serving in a tremendous ministry to abused girls and boys. Human trafficking is a terrible plague here in Mexico and world-wide. The ‘casa hogar’ children’s refuge ministry dorms where Paola works have well over one hundred rescued girls and a lesser number of young boys as well. The super valiant lady who started this compassionate ministry to the helpless has had to leave the country. Why? She was threatened with death by organized crime here for messing with their lucrative trade in precious young lives. But, thank the LORD, her powerful work to rescue the terribly abused young people goes on. Please uplift Paola and her super brave team!

picked up the concept that Jesus was the answer to her torment. “When I was 36, I first cried out to Jesus,” she said. “I was at the lowest of the low, the lowest moments of my life—one of the darkest moments. ... My soul, my spirit, knew to cry out to Jesus. I needed Him. ...and He really did show up.”

Her story illustrates the heavy responsibility of parents to maintain a home atmosphere that does not encourage dabbling in the occult. Today, it is increasingly difficult with trusted companies like Disney blatantly dumping diabolical stories and images into our family rooms.

Thank you for sending them these Chick tracts, bringing Jesus to these children.

ISRAEL

We just made arrangements to print another 40,000 bilingual Hebrew-English tracts in Israel. The missionary there finds the tract distribution going very well, and is anxious to continue. We have seen some of the newspaper clippings from this area where the orthodox Jewish leaders are furious to see the Gospel of Jesus Christ showing up in homes all over town! Nothing has changed, has it?

Readers learn Hebrew as they read the Gospel.

Seth Kirschner, creator of “Little Demon”, said, “We are going to keep going for it until we are told no.” This makes it obvious there is really a demon behind that kind of determination. We need to register our “no” by refusing to allow such programming into our homes.

We can also counter it with wholesome literature that exposes the lies of the demons and replaces it with “instruction in righteousness.” Chick Publications has one tract, Bewitched, and a Crusaders Comic, Angel of Light, that carry a powerful antidote. You can review and purchase them on www.chick.com.

Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

We in the church today have lived in comfort far longer than almost any generation that has gone before.

And now we are at a crossroads.

The Bible tells us that one day the world will be ruled by a single man, the beast, an antichrist who will demand that all worship him. The technology to do most of this is already in place, as we pointed out in the Chick tract, I See You. It's not a question of whether we are being spied on; it is only a question of who is doing the spying, and how much. It is a form of bondage, with every move being tracked.

At the same time, as we keep hearing in the news, people are being trafficked —abducted, bought and sold like cattle— all over the world. It's like the bondage to Mystery Babylon in Revelation 18:13 "...slaves, and souls of men."

But there is a bondage far worse: the bondage of sin. Its punishment is death and eternal torment, separated from God. Thank God for the many people who are fighting human trafficking all over earth. But God gave us a way to point people to the key that frees every soul from bondage to sin: Jesus Christ.

In this dark world, Chick gospel tracts are like flashlights that don't go out. They shine on us all, exposing our sin and our need for Jesus. The scripture verses are the batteries. Jack Chick always said, "the power of a Chick tract is the scriptures."

It's so easy to hand them out. Some people refuse flashlights, preferring to stay in the dark. But to those who receive them, Jesus is revealed as the light of the world.

Let's be light in the darkness. God will free so many people from bondage to sin, if we are faithful.

In Christ Jesus, and for His service,
